At this point Colonel C. P. Iaukea kindly furnished the reporter with : handsome map of the district, showing the surveys made and the old and new roads to the Volcano. The map also shows another projected road to Madame Pele's habitation, which will save seven miles over the present one and will be the one utilized for an electric road some of these days in the not far distant future, when American capital and industry shall have transformed Hilo into a fine harbor and city. With the map the Commissioner also handed the STAR representative two reports from E. D. Baldwin, the surveyor under whose direction the work spoken of above has been done. The first of these reports shows the improvements made up to June 30th last on lands leased to natives only in that portion fo the tract spoken of above. In this connection it should be remembered that the survey of the Olaa tract was only authorized in March of last year, and that leases to the land comprised in the following report were only made out from January 1st of this year, although many of the homesteaders had commenced to work on the lands for some months previously. The following report speaks for itself:

"Do you think that any trouble will rise over the suffrage question?" said the reporter.

Mr. Fugii paused thoughtfully. "May I quote you as saying that here is no danger of a serious misunderstanding?"

"Yes," replied the Consul-General, you may say that." "Will there be any more necessity, so far as you know, for the presence here of Japanese cruisers?" "That is another question," said Mr. Fugii with a diplomatic smile. The Consul-General admitted that he had talked to Minister Blount about the franchise question. "Can you give us any clew as to his

Now as subjects of the most favored nations have certain held by the natives in the Nuuanu Val voting privileges here, we ask the same concession, as we have a perfect right to. Why not? Of course, in the event of annexation we should be on a plane with other foreigners who could not vote without becoming American citizens. Of that we could make no complaint.

This closed the interview, Mr. Fujii not wishing to go into particulars about the present status of the suffrage case.
